The Depths of Style

In an attempt to describe "style," writer and former Vera Wang designer Mital Shah traveled to South Africa to, in her words, "travel and be traveled." The results of her experiences are illustrated in her beautiful 312-page book, Wellsouled, the first in a six-part series of different destinations. Shah looks at cultural traditions, individual expressions, and lifestyles, revealing both inner and outer beauty, through a collection of fashion portraits, interviews, poetry, breathtaking landscape photography, and historical narratives. Each copy is hand-numbered, bound in deep gray linen, and encased in a telescope box. Twenty percent of sales will benefit social partnerships in South Africa. $110. —LAUREN AIKEN More: wellsouled.com

The southern side of the Rocky Mountains boasts spectacular, striated cliffs and peaks rising to 14,000 feet, a warmer, drier climate that gives way to longer outdoor seasons, and residents who are as genuine as the setting. It also boasts Glacier Club, a private golf and residential community surrounded by 3 million acres of National Forest just outside of Durango, Colorado. Here you can golf not just 18, but 27 holes, dine at the award-winning clubhouse, and enjoy a concierge service designed to accommodate your every need.

And now, getting to Glacier Club is even easier. New direct flights to Durango have just been added from more than 50 U.S. cities. So, we invite you to come and visit Glacier Club.
